PETALPALOOZA TAKES OVER THE WHARF

Former "Southwest Waterfront Fireworks Festival" takes a new shape

urday, April 7 from 1 to 9:30 p.m., the inaugural Petalpalooza presented by FreshDirect will make its highly anticipated debut at The Wharf, DC's newest half-mile-long waterfront destination. Formerly known as the Southwest Waterfront Fireworks Festival, Petalpalooza will include interactive art installations, larger-than-life games and activities, live music on three outdoor stages, a roller rink, a beer garden, a spectacular fireworks show by Pyrotecnico, and much more along the piers of the Southwest Waterfront, the "home of the cherry blossoms."

Enjoy more than eight energetic hours of live music on three waterfront stages, including the DC Lottery Main Stage, a floating "202 Stage" showcasing DC's homegrown talent, and an Acoustic Lounge. On the Fresh Direct 202 Pier. attendees will let the good times roll in the free roller skating rink, with special roller dancer performances throughout the day.

All are encouraged to release their inner Picasso with bike spin art, Japanese calligraphy, Gyotaku fish prints, plein air artists, and more. Plus, there will be no shortage of selfie-worthy snapshots, including an interactive "flower-by-numbers" wall and life-sized photo frames.

In the Samuel Adams Beer Garden on the District Pier and Transit Pier, guests can stay hydrated with free samples from LaCroix and Coca-Cola soft drinks for sale. FreshDirect will be giving away special snack packs for attendees, L'Occitane En Provence cherry blossom product samples will be distributed from the L'Occitruck, and children can make their own T-shirts with Harbor Patrol. Even four-legged friends can join the festivities with special amenities for dogs at Petalpalooza's Pop-Up Parklet, sponsored by Mars Petcare and its Better Cities for PetsTM program.

Of course, the fireworks tradition lives on, as a dazzling choreographed display of more than 4,000 effects will light up

DC's night sky above the Washington Channel.

Several DC-based artists will be featured throughout Petalpalooza's programming thanks to a grant awarded to the National Cherry Blossom Festival by the DC Commission on the Arts and Humanities, including the following:

- Performances by DC-based bands La Unica, Broke Royals, and AZTEC SUN on the 202 Stage
- A "Flower by Number" interactive visual art installation featuring DC-based artist Kellie Cox
- A roller skating rink with skating performances by DC-based dancers
- Two DC-based plein air artists: Samantha Testa and Kasey O'Boyle
- A fireworks prelude performance by DC's own StepAfrika!

This initiative was designed to honor the roots of the event, which was created in 2004 by and for the Southwest DC community. In 2018 the event moves into a new venue-the long-awaited Southwest Waterfront redevelopment project, The Wharf. To reinforce the community's sense of identity at this long-standing event as it enters a new chapter of life in its new home. Southwest DC residents have been given special recognition through the 202 Pier area of the event, both as participating artists and attendees.

Amidon-Bowen Parents Tell Mayor and Chancellor: Stop Shortchanging Our Children

BY: GRACE HU AND BETSY WOLF

n March 8, parents at Amidon-Bowen Elementary School launched a campaign to lobby Mayor Muriel Bowser and DC Public Schools (DCPS) Interim Chancellor Amanda Alexander to provide additional funding to our Southwest neighborhood elementary school. Parents identified two main sources of these problems. First, Bowser's 2018-19 budget did not provide enough funds to the school district as a whole to keep up with inflation and other higher costs. Second, the school district failed to provide a fair share of funding to higher-need schools such as Amidon-Bowen. The combination of these poor decisions threatens the education of our Southwest neighborhood children at a time when the school is making significant progress.

Although Amidon-Bowen is classified by the school district as a "priority school" needing intense support to address low student performance, this year's budget continues a pattern of underfunding staffing, classroom information technology, and other needs.

Below are excerpts from parents' emails sent to DCPS and/or city officials. To preserve the integrity of the budget process, which has not been completed at the time of this article's submission, we have excluded information on specific cuts being discussed.

"I am writing to alert you to the unacceptable budget cuts at Amidon-Bowen Elementary School and to implore you to provide Amidon-Bowen with additional funding for the upcoming school year. I am a parent at Amidon-Bowen, and I am concerned that if DCPS does not increase our budget, it will hurt our students' education and further entrench the inequality plaguing DC and DCPS." -Betsy W. and Ava M.

"My son is in PreK-4 and has thrived at [Amidon-Bowen]. He is in a loving, supported environment which will deteriorate considerably under the new budget. I know ours is not the only family that will feel the negative repercussions. [Amidon-Bowen] has evolved so much since we moved to Southwest in 2012, and ... this is an inopportune time to slash resources." -Sylvia C.

"A key to the future success of this neighborhood will be the success of Amidon's students. To best equip Amidon's students and SWDC for success, the school should continue its broad base education program. I not only hope that DC budgeting will find room in its budget allocation to accommodate [current levels of staffing], but that additional funds will be allocated to ensure the school can continue to improve." -Daniel W.

"The bottom line is this: Amidon-Bowen serves a highly 'at risk' population and needs more funding than schools not facing similar challenges, yet it actually receives less instructional funding on a per-student basis than a number of wealthier schools. If one cross-references school staff directories with DC public employee salary information, it shows that DCPS is spending hundreds, and in some cases thousands, of dollars more per student on instructional staff salaries at certain schools serving children from affluent backgrounds than on children attending Amidon-Bowen. If DC and DCPS are committed to equality in educational opportunities, something has to change." -Betsy W. and Ava M.

"DCPS has said that promoting equity is a priority. And yet it continues to underfund schools like Amidon-Bowen that serve a high-need student population. ... I hope that you can find a way to assist Amidon, so that it continues to be a school that enriches the lives of our children and one the neighborhood wants to attend. I am also copying the ANC reps for where I reside, as well as where Amidon is located." -Laura M.

"Yes, I know that the mayor's budget press release trumpeted 'an additional $105 million to increase the per student rate and meet the needs of a growing student body.' Here's what else I know: According to the DC Fiscal Policy insti-

The 6821 Quintet

Collaboration with composer Kunihiko Murai

March 26, 2018 at 12:10pm

at National Gallery of Art, East Building Auditorium

Please Register Here

The 6821 Quintet (cleverly named to reflect the distance from Tokyo to DC) consists of international artists coming together to fulfill the understanding that music brings disparate cultures together.

The group will put on performances during the National Cherry Blossom Festival in March, and will be showcasing their musical artistry at various venues around the DC area.

Kunihiko Murai (composer and producer)

Kuni Murai is a Japanese composer and producer based in Los Angeles. He has written over 300 songs and 30 film scores, including Tampopo. His hit song Tsubasa wo Kudasai (Wings to Fly) is published in school music books across Japan and has been covered by hundreds of artists around the world. As the founder of Alfa Records, he has produced internationally renowned artists such as Yumin and Yellow Magic Orchestra (YMO). Today, he continues to compose music for recording artists, the stage and the screen. Most recently, he composed the musical La Comtesse de Cagliostro, which had a successful run in Tokyo.

There's A Party Goin' On

BY: SHARON FLYNN

n the evening of Tuesday, Feb. 13, if you were anywhere other than Westminster Presbyterian Church for the first anniversary celebration of the DC Waterfront Village, you missed out. Any stranger strolling by would have every clue: "There's A Party Goin' On." Walk-ins were welcome in addition to the 100-plus people who had registered. The place was filled to capacity.

Fourteen exhibitors, ranging from Georgetown Home Care to

A First Class Move to District Hardware and Bike, along with other types of senior living resources, offered their services to attendees. From stem to stern, Westminster took on the navigational facade of sailing and boating. Sparkling white harbor lights and more than 100 tiny sailboats were hung from the walls to illustrate Waterfront Village's theme: navigating together. Outside, luminaries lined the sidewalk to the church, and near the

"We are completely overcome with this outpouring of support from the community," said Executive Director Bob Craycraft. "This is an important year for us. We have reached our milestone goal of 100 member households and made great strides in our services, along with scores of programs and activities to prevent social isolation."

During the program, the stage resembled a coming together of Southwest DC's own luminaries. The welcome was by Deborah Ratner Salzberg, president of Forest City Washington, one of the major anniversary sponsors, along with JBG Smith. Ratner Salzberg said the Village offered the kind of services that her late mother-in-law would have relished, such as the weekly trips to the grocery store. "The concept is great, and there are so many services and activities provided through Waterfront Village for people aging in place or full of vigor and activity."

The opening address was given by DC Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton. "This is the place where there ought to be a senior Village because as the neighborhood comes alive in so many ways, the last thing we want to do is see people who have lived in this neighborhood, made it grow, leave just as the neighborhood itself is growing," she said. "So it means a great deal to me that you have created a senior Village right here in Southwest Washington."

AMIDON-BOWEN

tute, around $81 million of the new funding is needed just to keep up with growth in enrollment.

- In fact, adjusted for inflation, per pupil spending is now 3% less than it was nearly a decade ago, in 2009. The mayor can brag about record funding all she wants, but it doesn't take a PhD economist to know that funding that doesn't even keep pace with inflation (or enrollment growth) is really a cut.
- Last year, the mayor proposed a per-pupil funding increase of 1.5%. Only after some last-minute heroics from Councilmember Grosso was it increased to 2.38%—still dramatically less than the 3.5% recommended by OSSE [the Office of the State Superintendent of Education].
- And even as schools try to claw (unsuccessfully) anywhere near a 3.5% annual increase in the per pupil rate, we're actually around 12% below the funding recommended in the DC Education Adequacy Study commissioned by the Deputy Mayor for Education a few years ago.

Maybe we just don't have the money? Well, all of this is happening while the district is reporting record tax surpluses and continuing to implement a series of tax cuts that won praise from Grover Norquist and The Daily Caller. ...

What does this say about our values? We're a supposedly progressive jurisdiction facing real challenges when it comes to closing the achievement gap and providing a high quality public education for all." –Ken M.

As the last parent letter notes, what does the current state of school funding say about our city's values and priorities? As parents, we will not sit still and tolerate cuts to our neighborhood school, even as construction cranes, The Wharf, and other new developments speak to the growing prosperity and vitality of the city.

If you also think the city should adequately fund its schools, please email Mayor Bowser (Muriel.bowser@dc.gov), as well as Councilmembers Charles Allen, David Grosso, and Robert White (callen@dccouncil.us, dgrosso@dccouncil.us, rwhite@dccouncil.us), and ask them to prioritize funding for DCPS, and specifically, our neighborhood schools: Amidon-Bowen and Jefferson Middle School Academy.

Lastly, it is not enough to provide sufficient resources to our schools; the distribution of funding must be transparent and equitable. The disparities between schools in our neighborhood and those in wealthier parts of the city are significant (and would require another article to detail). For now, we leave you with the graph on page 2.

Emergency Preparedness in SWDC— Focus Group Participants Wanted

he Southwest Neighborhood Assembly Emergency Preparedness Task Force (SWNA EPTF), with the support of graduate students from the Department of Behavioral and Community Health at the University of Maryland, is organizing two one-hour focus groups in mid-April to better gauge the ideas and concerns of SW residents regarding the state of disaster preparedness in the community. Participants will be asked several questions such as: How prepared do you think we are in SW for disaster of any kind-snow storms, hurricanes, earthquakes, floods, or a terrorist incident? What steps are you taking to prepare yourself? Do you know where to turn for disaster preparedness information? What ideas do you have to improve disaster preparedness in the District including our neighborhood of SW?

The goal is to summarize the information, discuss it with colleagues at the DC Emergency Management Agency, and then produce a summary article to be published in the June issue of The Southwester. In addition, EPTF will strive toward addressing the issues raised by the participants in the focus groups.

As a short reminder, EPTF is one of several task forces that make up SWNA. It started in 2011 and its vision is to build a disaster-resilient SWDC. The task force's basic mission is to organize stimulating activities throughout SW that aim to help raise disaster preparedness awareness at the individual, family, and community level. Activities hosted to date include presentations on urban search and rescue; effects of climate change; disaster resilience; family preparedness; evacuations; a flood exercise; and, for children, the Pillow Case Project.

Please contact one of us below to join one of our focus groups on April 11 or 12 at the SW Business Improvement District office (420 4th St. SW) from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Snacks and soft drinks will be provided.

NO KINGS COLLECTIVE

BRAND NEW | SW

The Hirshhorn joins with DC's dynamic art scene to pay tribute to the pioneering art practices of the 1980s. Washington-based artists No Kings Collective, NoMüNoMü, and SUPERWAXX created these branded graphic posters, which were inspired by Brand New: Art + Commodity in the 1980s, an exhibition that explores an iconic decade when artists blurred the boundary between art and marketing.

Brand New SW is part of Hirshhorn in the City, the Museum's initiative to bring contemporary art beyond the gallery walls and connect artists and curators to DC neighborhoods.
